

Script: Researcher recruitment for CONNECT

GG: Hi! I'm Georgie and this is Nathaniel. We work at the Centre for Society and Mental Health at King's College London. Nathaniel also works for Black Thrive.

We're doing a study that looks at the Contributions of Social Networks to Community Thriving. Long story short, we want to understand how social connections influence wellbeing in minority groups in diverse communities.

NM: Right now, we're looking to expand our team. If you are over 16, identify as belonging to an ethnically minoritised group, and live in Southwark or Lambeth, we would love to hear from you.

GG: You don't need any past research experience to join us. We'll give you all the training you need and will pay you on an hourly basis. You'll get to build ideas, do interviews with members of your community, and even learn to lead workshops. You'll also get some hands on experience analysing data and sharing findings.

NM: You'll become a valued part of our team and hopefully, learn a lot! Another perk is this will give you a chance to expand your own networks and make a real change in your community. If you're passionate about making a difference and improving wellbeing in your community while getting paid for your time, click the link below and submit your application to join us. Thanks!
